Sputnik Challenge Is Unmistakable

If the warning of Sputnik I was clear and loud, that of Sputnik II is unmistakable. It should end all argument over the urgent need to speed this country's scientific program.

This new satellite weighs half a ton. It has been launched by rockets far more powerful than any the U.S. has available. These rockets may be powerful enough to launch an intercontinental missile with a nuclear warhead. It is carrying a live passenger in an orbit more than 1,000 miles above the earth together with a variety of scientific instruments which Moscow has not yet described in detail.

It is not enough to admit that the Russians have gained a tremendous advantage in their propaganda campaign to impress weak and wavering nations with the extent of Soviet scientific prowess.

What is still lacking is a sense of desperate urgency in this country's missile and satellite programs. And no one is fooled by pretensions of unconcern over lack of demonstrable progress. The evidence of Soviet leadership is before everybody's eyes and this country has shown nothing to counter it.

In attempting to fool others, those in authority may also fool themselves into making less than the all-out effort the situation demands.

This danger was apparent a few days ago when the ousting of Marshal Zhukov had concentrated attention on the dissension and division within the Soviet hierarchy, Now Sputnik II is a new reminder of the mounting power for destruction in Russian hands and the tremendous technical strides the Soviets have made.

That is of far greater immediate concern to the free world than the struggle within the Kremlin among a group of equally dedicated and implacable Communists over who is to possess and wield this power.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Boondoggling

Somebody sent me four volumes of hearings in the matter of "Power Authority of the State of New York, Project No. 2216." The total comes to 609 pages of mimeographed material. At $1.50 a page for the transcription this comes to nearly $1,000 of garbage not including postage. I do not know how many others were sent this stuff but it just goes to show what happens when a bureaucracy gets hold of something. It always becomes what the youngsters call a Federal case.

This one is before the Federal Power Commission which must have a lot of time on its hands. I glanced through the stuff. It starts with a long speech by somebody called "Presiding Examiner," who tells the folks how they should behave in front of company. He says, for instance:

"I might mention that smoking is not permitted during the sessions of the hearing. You can smoke in this room between sessions or during recess periods. I notice there are ash trays here for that purpose . .

I'm glad to see that the government provides ash trays and that the spectators will not throw their cigaret butts on the carpet. This is very thoughtful of the Presiding Examiner because whenever I go into a government office building, it always appears to be dirty as though vacuum cleaners and scrub women were unavailable

Anyhow, all these pages deal with what to do about Niagara Power. At the present time, most of the industries which formerly used Niagara Power are purchasing theirs from Canada, which is on the ball. But the rate is very high and if it remains that high, I am told, the businesses will have to move away. This long record shows that the Power Authority of the State of New York has applied for a license for a proposed hydroelectric project on the Niagara River in Niagara County, New York and that the city of Niagara Falls, Town of Lewiston, has opposed the plans concerning water conduits and the reservoir area as proposed by

So that starts a long hearing which keeps all the officials busy but power meanwhile is being purchased from Canada. Well, I have to skip some of the pages because it seems as though a lot of lawyers get into the act, which means that somebody is making some money out of it besides the Canadians. Apparently the Presiding Examiner is worried about the large number of lawyers who got into this thing, because he said:

We will try to keep your names straight. I hope you will be patient with us if we make some mistakes. Most everyone here is a new face to me, and I presume there are others in that same boat, so be tolerant if we mix your name up a little bit occasionally or the party you represent as well. Those things seem to be inevitable in a hearing of this size.

Maybe they ought to retain my good friend, Jim Farley, to help them out. Jim never forgets a name or a face and always keeps the record straight. However, they have to work out procedures; in a word, someone needs to decide how the bureaucracy is to keep this thing going. The Presiding Examiner says:

"Now, there may have been some discussions among counsel as to the procedure here. The Examiner is always anxious to carry out any arrangements that counsel have made among themselves for their own convenience as long as it doesn't interfere with the orderly processes of

So Sam Rosenman points out that the engineers cannot agree on basic data and that is wasting time. This fight is not new. It has been in Congress since 1950. This year Congress passed a law which is a compromise between private power and public power. While these hearings are going on, the price of building materials is going up and the Power Authority cannot tell whether the cost will be $600,000,000 or $800,-000,000 because no one, in an inflationary period, can

Well, I finished reading Sam Rosenman's statement and looked through the following pages and saw that the lawyers were going on forever and forever. Meanwhile, the Canadians are making hay while we hold hearings and the lawyers earn fees. It is a good racket if you can get into it.

The Real And Deadly Meaning Of Sputnik II

By Stewart Alsop

In the virtually unanimous opinion of the experts, Sputnik II proves beyond serious question that the Western world is in deadly danger. This is the unpleasant truth which lies behind all the reassuring official protestations that the Soviet satellites have "no military implica-The military implications of Moscow of a "new power source," experts in this country were speculating, in the wake of Sputnik II, about the possibility that the Soviets had discovered an entirely new rocket fuel. There seemed no other logical explanation of the Soviet success in launching into orbit a satellite weighing half a ton. "With the stuff we've got," one expert said, "we just wouldn't know how to do it.".

Sputnik II fall into two categor-

"Either they've got a new fuel," another said, "or they've developed a rocket motor with a thrust of a million pounds. I don't know which would be worse." Whether or not the Soviets have developed a new fuel, Sputnik II unquestionably means that Nikita Khrushchev's boast last Sunday, that the Soviets already have "intercontinental rockets" capable of "delivering hydrogen bomb warheads to any point in the globe' must be taken entirely seriously. So must his boast that the American "military bases in Europe, Africa and Asia" have "long since" been subject to mis-

As reported in February, 1956, in this space, this country is working on a reconnaissance satellite, capable of detecting important military movements and concentrations anywhere in the world. But "Project Big Brother," as the reconnaissance satellite program has been informally dubbed, is still in the blueprint stage. This is largely because the missile art in this country has not yet reached the stage where the necessarily heavy equipment for an effective reconnaissance satellite could be launched into orbit.

But the half-ton weight of Sputnik II would be amply sufficient But there is a growing body of to carry the equipment for an

Yet what has scared some of the experts more than anything else is the hint that the Soviets may be able to bring down the unfortunate dog in Sputnik II, still alive, at a pre-designated spot. If the Soviets actually succeed in doing so, a great collective shiver will go through the whole scientific and intelligence community.

So it must that a satellite which would be itself a weapon, capable of carrying and delivering a thermonuclear weapon, was virtually impossible of achievement. There is no known active project to achieve such a weapon-satellite going forward in this country.

Yet if a dog in a sealed space capsule can be successfully reentered at a chosen place, why not a bomb? And if one such weapon-satellite can be launched, why not dozens, to form above the whole world a universal sword of Damocles, controlled from Moscow.

This is, of course, a nightmare but it is a nightmare which will take on a certain color of reality if the little dog on Sputnik II ever again treads the earth. But even if that never happens, the danger to the West, of which Sputnik II serves as a symbol, is deadly enough. Surely, in the circumstances, the time has come for truth-telling, and fact-facing, and an end to official complacency.

Cold May Be Unfashionable But It's Still Here

Do you remember the common cold? It was quite a problem before Asian influenza took it off

At Senators' Briefing On Missiles

Armed Services Feud Flares Up

that his heart attack alerted him. It was better to have a warning, he said, so long as it wasn't fatal. Each service was allotted one hour to brief the Senators. However, the Army spent two and a half hours and made powerful claims for jurisdiction over ballistic missiles.

Battled For Army

Senator Russell sided with the Army. At one point, he bluntly asked the Air Force why it was in the ballistics business, which he considered the Army's field.

"I understand all the Jupiters have been successful and only part of the Thors have been successful," Russell declared at one point. He demanded to know why the Defense Department had been "holding back" the Jupiter.

The other two Senators did not take sides in the inter-service missile feud, but asked broad questions.

The Navy, for its part, told the Senators it was dissatisfied with the Vanguard program, had never liked it, and had been forced

The Air Force claimed all its missile projects were on schedule. Regarding the Thor, it claimed all the failures had been purely mechanical and that nothing basically wrong had been discovered. On the other hand, some of the Jupiter's failures had been caused by basic malfunctions, the Air Force claimed. The Air Force also argued that its Thor was a production-line model, whereas the Jupiter was hand-

Undersecretary of Defense Quarles did most of the speaking for the Defense Department regarding the Sputnik. He made no attempt to belittle the Soviet achievement. Sputnik, he said, was launched from a point east of the Caspian Sea at a 65-degree angle. This required far more power, he told the Senators, than we would use to launch our Sputnik at Cape Canaveral at a 35degree angle

The meeting adjourned at 6 p. m. to permit Secretary of Defense McElroy, Undersecretary Quarles, and Gen. Nate Twining to attend a White House dinner. As a result, the Air Force, last on the briefing list, had little time to present its side of the picture.

Electronic Spy

It's impossible to exaggerate

The alarm is based on the fact that Sputnik II is of such size that it could become an electronic spy on every military installation in the United States. The dog-carrying Sputnik is probably peaceful enough. But the next could be equipped with instruments able to locate all U. S. defense installations and spy on our military movements. Sputnik can communicate its secret code to Moscow. It could report on what it sees in the United States, in NATO, or anyplace

else in the world. Our scientists also figure that Sputnik might even locate our secret stockpile of atomic bombs. If so, Russia would have the most priceless secret in the entire United States and would be able to strike at this stockpile first in case of war. Even if we moved the stockpile from place to place, Sputnik's electronic brain would be able to spot the change.

That's why there have been such urgent conferences inside the Pentagon on how to shoot down Sputnik. Though the White House is worried about our lag in launching a satellite, the Pentagon is more worried about finding a way to shoot down any electronic espionage satellite next. They have now devised a provisional anti-satellite-satellite. which in the Pentagon's abbreviated language, was first called "Project Ass." It has been re-

Maybe Yes, Maybe No

EN ROUTE TO MOSCOW, Nov. 7-(INS) The air traveller behind the Iron Curtain leads a life only vaguely similar to, let us say, the man trying to fly from New York to Chicago or Los Angeles to San Francisco. About the only thing they have in common is that both use the flying machine.

"Certainly!" he replied with dobbed loyalty or stout subser-

tant airdrome. There sat the glittering jet with its great swept wing, big-mouthed engine air intakes and guillotine blade of a tail. It made an impressive picture in the bright sunlight.

So the next day we arrived at the airport at the suggested time of 8 a. m. It was very foggy. The new face behind the counter said maybe the plane would go, maybe not, but she took our passport and tickets, weighed the baggage and after much figuring on a piece of grey cardboard with a hard lead pencil, the girl said 580 korunas overweight. The poor, frightened Czechs have compounded the confusion which flourishes in the realm of the "people's democracies." They seem to be afraid to report that Russia's handsome TU-104 jet will depart for Moscow and too timid to offer the opinion that it will not. The truth of the matter is that the Russians just don't bother telling the Czech airline and travel people.

"Is the four o'clock jet to Moscow running on time?" we asked the travel man at Prague's seedy Alcron Hotel the other day.

So off we raced to the bi

We weighed in and surrendered our passport and ticket to a pretty young girl in a blue uniform behind the counter. Her brow furrowed unhappily.

"No to Moscow," she said, shaking her head. She added painfully that the plane would be late. How late, we asked in on hour, two hours or what? She cleared her throat sadly. "Tomorrow," she said. But what about other planes? She kept saying "Tomorrow." But why would the man downtown say it was going and now it wasn't? The girl shrugged helplessly.

"You are not at the hotel now and though you are a tourist you are touring out of the country not into it," he said blandly. So we paid $85 overweight instead of $30 worth of korunas. People just sat there, most of them staring vacantly, for hours and hours, with no announcement about their plane because, just like Macy's not telling Gimbel's, the Russians would not tell the Czechs.

Here was a bleary cross-section of the Soviet world: little-known Sudanese Communists, Red Chinese, North Koreans, Bulgarians, Hungarians, Germans, Italians, Russians and a Czech general named Chyle who represented his government for ten years in Cleveland and six years in Washington, speaks excellent English and was headed for Panmunjom. He made jokes and smiled with tiny brown teeth. A playboy of the Eastern world.

Beall High Gets New Intercom System

Wayne W. Hill, standing at left, principal of Beall High School is shown making necessary adjustments on the new intercom system installed recently at the school. Thomas Jacobs. (seated) chaplain of the Student Council, prepares to broadcast the morning devotions to all homerooms of the school. Eugene Eagan, president of the Student Council observes at the right. Mr. Hill states that the new system just installed fills a great need at the school. It is now possible to communicate with any room of the school by merely pushing a button. The system also makes it possible to connect any number of rooms together for a broadcast which may be pertinent to them. At the same time it is possible to talk to two other groups at the same time. A turntable for playing records may be seen at the bottom center with a radio directly above, It is possible Hill said to pipe the radio to one group, the records to another and by using the microphone carry on a conversation with another group. The system will be used to rebroadcast important radio programs to social studies groups, to play records for dances in the gymnasium or in auditorium before and after plays.

Westminster, Allegany Play CVAL Game Here Tonight

Rebels Face Fort Hill In Hagerstown

LaSalle To Invade Bedford; Hundred Plays At Beall

Coach Herb Ruby's Westminster High School Owls, who were given a 34-14 spanking on their home field by Fort Hill two weeks ago, come here tonight to 68 tangle with Allegany High School's Campers in a Cumberland Valley Athletic League football game at 8 o'clock.

The Carroll countians had won five in a row until they ran afoul of the Sentinels and that setback was reflected in the outcome of last week's contest in which Westminster was held to a 6-6 tie by Hanover, Pa.

Tonight's game is a battle for the runner-up spot in the C.V.A.L. The Owls occupy that spot now with a 3-1 record while the Campers are 2-1 in the eight school circuit. A win for Allegany would put Coach Chester Payne's eleven in second place. The Campobello eleven has been idle since October 25 when it went down before LaSalle's Explorers.

"Bobby" Cavanaugh, John Shelton, John Blough and "Bee" Orndorff will officiate in tonight's game at the Greenway Avenue

Sentinels Visit Rebels

Coach Bill Hahn's undefeated Fort Hill Sentinels will be shooting for win No. 18 when they invade Hagerstown tonight to tackle South Hagerstown High's Rebels for the first time in a football game. This is South High's first football venture and Coach Cochran's eleven has won only one game while losing five and play-

Fort Hill will be seeking its fifth league victory after having already brushed aside Frederick, Martinsburg, Handley and Westminster. This will be the Sentinels' final game away from home this season

Bedford Hosts LaSalle

Victorious in their last two outings against Allegany and Ridgeley. LaSalle's Explorers invade Bedford, Pa., tonight to play Coach Harold Wilkinson's winless Bisons. The Bedford Countians are having one of their worst seasons and now own an 0-6-1 record. Bedford handed Coach Geatz's eleven a 35-7 beating last year and holds a 4-1 edge in their

The fourth Friday night battle in which an Allegany county team is involved brings together Beall High School's Mountaineers and Hundred (W. Va.) High School at Frostburg.

Hundred Invades Beall

Hundred is coached by Jimmy Orr, former Beall High and Fairmont State College athlete, and the game was booked late to fill an open date on the Mountaineers' schedule.

Coach Jerry Calhoun's eleven is now 4-3 and has games with Hundred, Handley and LaSalle before the season draws to a close. Beall owns a 3-game winning streak at the expense of Romney, Northern and Charles

Keyser Seeks 4th Title

Keyser High School, fresh from a 33-0 victory over Southern of Oakland on Wednesday, lowers the curtain on its regular 10-game schedule today in a Potomac Valley Conference game at Romney. Coach "Tack" Clark's team will be striving for its 26th straight win. This season the Clarkmen have won nine games. A win over Romney today will give the Mineral Countians their fourth consecutive P.V.C. championship. They've bagged 19 games in that circuit.

In other P.V.C. game, Berkeley Springs hosts the Moorefield High Yellow Jackets in a game that was postponed from October
